Families, Education, Preschool, and Promise 2025 Levy Renewal Process

The Families, Education, Preschool, and Promise (FEPP) Levy is approaching renewal, with the mayor set to announce his proposed plan in April. In his recent State of the City address, the mayor emphasized that the renewed levy will deepen investments in childcare, after-school, and summer programs; expand access to in-school health centers and mental health supports; and create stronger pathways to careers in trades and public service. The proposal aims to make Seattle a national leader in supporting children and families from cradle to career, ensuring safety, resilience, and opportunity for the next generation.
